Xerox grants Poly $1 million in computers

By ROSEMARY COSTANZO
Staff Writer

The School of Engineering will be receiving over $1 million in state-of-the-art computers from the Xerox corporation.

"We are most appreciative of this substantial grant from Xerox because it will make it possible for the faculty and students of our computer science department to use state-of-the-art hardware and software in their coursework," said Cal Poly President Warren Baker.

"One of the few ways we can obtain the computer systems needed to maintain the necessary margin of excellence in these programs is through the assistance of our friends in industry," he said.

Cal Poly is among 13 universities in the United States and England that will receive a grant for computer hardware, software and services from Xerox.

Cornell University, Princeton, Cambridge, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology are among the other schools receiving grants. The names of all the schools will be released next week through a national press release.

The grant includes 25 of the newest high-performance computer workstations in the Xerox inventory. In addition to the hardware systems, the grants includes extensive software programs and documentation, as well as installation and training for faculty and staff who will be working with the Xerox system.

Dean of the School of Engineering, Dr. Duane Bruley, said the new system will be installed in the department's Computer Systems Laboratory and should be ready for use in Spring Quarter courses.

Bruley said the system will be used for instruction in software development and engineering, telecommunications, operating systems and hardware architecture. Students and faculty will be using the Xerox system for research projects in those areas.

"As a new dean, I see this grant as a tremendous step forward for Cal Poly," Bruley said. He added that the attainment of this grant was the result of a team effort by officials of the university and Xerox.

Xerox vice president and regional manager, Gilbert Scott, said that his firm's grants to the 13 universities are the first large scale grants Xerox has made in the field of computer programming systems and networks.

"We count heavily on Cal Poly and the other top computer and engineering schools to provide a continuing supply of well prepared computer scientists and engineers for our research and development activities," Scott said.

"This grant will help assure us that the young people who come to us over the next several years from Cal Poly and the other universities will be familiar with our firm's computer and software systems."

"One of our objectives is to bring the best product to the market place," said Scott. "Through this grant we hope to better understand our product, as well as assist students' learning. We see this grant as an extension of our corporation's commitment to the community and to the students," said Scott.

Carl Wayne, the Xerox manager for the university grant program, said Cal Poly is one of the largest sources of hiring for Xerox's Park Center and Palo Alto area. Wayne said that grants such as this one will produce attractive graduates to the computer industry. "By recruiting at Cal Poly we're confident that we're getting the best of the best to join Xerox."

Professor Neil Webre of the computer science department described the Xerox system as the grandfather of Apple computers' Lisa and Macintosh. "This system is viewed as outstanding. It will enable us to provide our students with state-of-the-art education," he said. Eight different languages can be used on the computer, including Japanese.

Included in the package are peripheral computing systems that will provide the file management, laser printing, and communications capability needed to combine the workstations into an interactive network.

Carl Wayne, University Grant Manager for the Xerox Corporation, explains the implications of a gift to the university. The computer equipment donated to Cal Poly, one of 13 schools in the United States and England to receive the state-of-the-art system, amounts to over $1 million.

Student poll reversed

Faculty backs Mondale in presidential race

By LISA MCKINNON
Staff Writer

In a complete reversal of the results of the student presidential poll published in the Mustang Daily Friday, 63 percent of the Cal Poly faculty who are registered to vote will support Walter Mondale in the presidential election tomorrow, according to a separate poll conducted by the Daily.

Thirty-five percent of the faculty who responded to the poll said they intend to vote for Ronald Reagan, and two percent said they were not registered to vote.

In contrast, 60 percent of Cal Poly students who are registered to vote and who participated in the student poll said they would support Reagan, while 26 percent said they would vote for Mondale. Thirty percent said they weren't going to vote, and one percent will support other candidates.

About 200 faculty were supplied with poll forms in the four day period between Oct. 30 and Nov. 2, and of those, 79 replied with information regarding age, sex, party affiliation, rank in the university and what school they teach in.

Most gave reasons for their choice of candidate which ranged from party loyalty to concern over the arms race to the perceived personalities of the candidates.

"My grandfather once told me he didn't care who I voted for as long as the person is a Democrat," wrote one Mondale supporter from the School of Professional Studies and Education.

"Mondale is less likely to use a 'Dirty Harry' foreign policy," commented a Communicative Arts and Humanities professor. "His policies are much more likely to reduce the risk of nuclear war and keep us out of war in Central America, while promoting human rights and social justice," a colleague added in agreement.

"Reagan is no wimp!" countered an instructor in the School of Science and Math.

"He (Reagan) is an excellent leader with enough guts to make decisions," added a Democrat Professional Studies and Education professor who has crossed party lines. "Mondale is a wimp — a true politician. Ferraro has no idea what reality is. She sounds like an eternal idealist."

Forty-two percent of the respondents were in the 36-45 age group, and 66 percent of them said they support Mondale. The majority of the 25-35 age group (representing 15 percent of the poll), and the 46-55 age group (26 percent), also said they would vote for the Democratic ticket.

Reagan got a foot in the door with the 56 and over age category which favored him at 54 percent.

Eighty-five percent of the respondents were male and 15 percent were female. While there was a clear split between men voting for Mondale (60 percent), and men voting for Reagan (40 percent), the gap was largest between women for Mondale (83 percent), and women for Reagan (17 percent). In the sampling, Mondale was most popular with women between 36 and 45.

One female assistant professor wrote, "Mondale shows more concern for human rights. Reagan is too business oriented. He is against the Equal Rights Amendment and is too quick to use military force to solve problems."

Registered Democrats made up most of the respondents at 54 percent. Registered Republicans accounted for another 36 percent, and ten percent listed themselves as independents.

The Republican Party's earlier prediction that hordes of Democrats would cross party lines to vote for the Republican ticket this year apparently does not apply to the faculty at Cal Poly, according to poll results.

Only three Democrats said they are jumping ship to vote for Reagan. In fact, more Republicans (five), are going to vote for the Democratic platform than vice versa.

Meanwhile, 75 percent of the independents said they favor Mondale. "I'm voting for Mondale) because Reagan represents disaster," said one registered independent from the 25-35 age group.

More full-time professors than assistant professors, associate professors and lecturers combined participated in the poll, and 65 percent of them said they intend to vote for Mondale.

All seven of the university's schools were included in the poll.

While some schools have more faculty members than others, definite polarities developed in terms of who the majority of a particular school supported.

The School of Communicative Arts and Humanities backed Mondale by nearly 90 percent, for example. Seventy-three percent of the School of Agriculture and Natural Resources said they would vote for Reagan.

An assistant professor from that school said he was supporting Reagan because of the candidate's "Godly principles." Another said simply, "I can't afford Mondale."

Supporters for both candidates mentioned that theirs was, "the only sane choice," or at least the "lesser of two evils."

Greeks contribute to community

The first word that comes to the mind of the average student when they hear fraternity or sorority is probably party.

But for many children and adults in the area, the word that might come to their mind when they hear sorority or fraternitiy is fun, help or caring.

During the recent Holloween festivities, fraternity and sorority members took time from their schedules and provided the community with many worthwhile activities.

The list of activities provided by the Greeks is too long to completely list, but it ranged from a haunted house built by Theta Chi, a blood drive by Phi Kappa Psi (appropriately on Halloween) to a party for the mentally retarded people of Casa De Vida by Lambda Chi Alpha.

Like all students, these fraternity and sorority members have many demands on their time, yet they find the a spot in their schedules for projects that benefit the whole community.

These projects not only improve the relationship between community members and the Greeks, but it also improves the image of all students in the community.

The good deeds of Greeks are also a reminder to all students that there are people in the immediate area whose life would be deeply affected with a little time and a lot of caring. The Greeks have shown they are willing to put forth the effort to reach out to those who are less fortunate.

The Mustang Daily editorial board salutes these fraternities and sororities for their community involvement, for they have consistently shown that they care about more than just their next party.

Republican urges vote out Reagan

Editor:

The possibility that the next administration might have the opportunity to name a number of new Supreme Court Justices makes the upcoming election truly the day of judgment for America.

The direction America will take if Reagan wins is only too clear. It is the direction of Jerry Falwell and his Fundamentalists — towards a "Christian" nation with prayers in the schools, opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment and with effective state control over our bodies as described by the "right to life." It is also the direction of James Watt, with his unthinking intent to use our natural resources for maximum present gain at the expense of the generations to come. (But isn't that what Reaganism promises over the entire spectrum of our activities including, in particular, our prosperity?)

Despite Reagan's obvious deficiencies and biases, too many voted for him in 1980 because of the preceived period of poor leadership and general malaise under Carter; the vote was against Carter rather than for Reagan. Today we have a similar situation: most Americans seem to prefer Reagan because of the improved business mood and despited the fact that his social and economic policies are seen to be unfair and fraught with potential problems.

I hope that I can convince the reader that Carter was not that bad and that our present "good times" probably did not result from any of Reagan's actions.

The general malaise under Carter resulted largely from the frustrations associated with the ever-increasing rise in the price of oil (made very obvious by the steady increase in the price of gasoline we so frequently bought at the pump). It had taken the price of everything else up with it, so we had inflation. With the high price of gasoline the demand for large American cars fell off with a consequent recession in Detroit. About the same time the Federal Reserve decided to fight the inflation by tightening the money supply, so interest rates leaped up knocking out the housing industry. So we had "stagflation."

But Carter (and Ford) had taken steps to cut the use of oil. They had mandated better fuel efficiencies for the new cars (would Reagan have interfered with Detroit in this manner?) and pushed the use of alternate energy sources. Reagan was the undeserving in the power of the cartel. Is it any wonder that Americans feel better now when a tank of gasoline is much less than the fifty dollars or more that it might have been without the break? And where would Detroit be now if the break hadn't come?

About the time of the break in oil prices the Federal Reserve awoke to the problem of high interest rates compounding the money supply leading to a modest improvement in the building trades. But interst rates will remain high until investors are confidant that the debt is under control. Until then we can expect our trade with the rest of the world to deteriorate and to have the U.S. increasingly in debt to overseas interests. Of course the average take home pay in the U.S. is up — the shortage of skilled workers to man the Reagan defense build up has led to greatly inflated pay scales in the technical industries.

Reagan has made much of the supposed inferiority of our defenses under the earlier administrations. If this were so, would the Russians not have taken advantage of it before we could start on our building program? We had more than sufficient weaponry to counter any move of the Russians: our submarine-borne missiles have been an adequate counter for the Russians' 1 and ICBMs. What Reagan's program is doing is to compromise our ability to sustain a good defense program by weakening our economy and jeopardizing our ability to wage a conventional war by antagonizing those who are likely to be in the front ranks in case of a such a war. It is also removing any possibility of coming to peaceful terms with the Russians.

We don't need Reagan's "Star War." If we want to do away with atomic weapons we should start at the other end, by providing an adequate non-atomic counter to the Russian conventional weapons massed on our allies' frontiers (it could be far cheaper and more certain of suc-

Mondale cited as better choice

Editor:

The 1984 presidential election will be upon us tomorrow. Candidates' promises, charges and accusations fill the air. Indeed, at this stage of the presidential race argument invariably gives way to "mudslinging." Many recent letters to this newspaper bear excellent witness to this observation.

At this point in the Presidential campaign we are all aware who supports which special interest, which candidate's record on domestic policy is weak and who advocates the least viable foreign policy. But which candidate has the most qualities to offer which can help our country?

I firmly believe that a close examination of experience, voting records and campaign platforms will easily reveal that Democratic nominee Wlter Mondale reflects the values and goals for which the United States stands.

Walter Mondale possesses a strong record of public service. Mr. Mondale has served as attorney general of Minnesota, U.S. senator and vice-president of the United States. Throughout his public career, Walter Mondale reflects the values and goals for which the United States stands.

Walter Mondale has a wealth of experience in domestic policy which few political leaders can equal. Mr. Mondale has proposed solutions to many of our country's most pressing economic problems which are both equitable and just. He has outlined a plan to reduce the federal government's ballooning budget deficit by two-thirds and offered proposals to address our record balance of trade deficits. Walter Mondale has also placed the problems confronting agriculture and heavy industries at the top of his domestic agenda.

Walter Mondale's record on civil rights cannot be assailed. Mr. Mondale has consistently worked to improve the quality of life which all Americans enjoy. He has worked to eliminate discrimination and to promote the equality of every citizen of the United States.

Walter Mondale has a firm grasp on national security issues. He has seved as a member of the National Security Council and been party to numerous defense decisions both as a member of the executive (branch) and during his career as U.S. senator.

Walter Mondale is no enemy of defense. Mr. Mondale advocates continuous and progressive development of the U.S. armed cess than any conceivable star war system). We could then renounce the "first use" of atomic weapons, as the Russians have.

The dangers inherent in a continued Reagan administration have been obvious to this very frustrated Republican. He hopes that a sufficient number of voters will join him in voting our president out of office!

Sidney Bertram, PhD
Lecturer, EL EE

services, but at a rate much more compatible with efforts to reduce the United States' record budget deficits. Mr. Mondale has called for sustained growth in the defense budget at a rate of four percent per year after adjustment for inflation. This growth will allow the United States to expand its military capabilities and produce a defense capable of dealing with situations which necessitate a military response.

In the realm of foreign policy Walter Mondale offers a voice of moderation in a sea of confrontation. Mr. Mondale is respected worldwide for his skills as a negotiator and for his efforts on behalf of world peace. Mr. Mondale understands that constant confrontation is no mean to achieve conflict resolutions. He will offer intelligent and wise decision-making aimed at promoting and protecting American interests worldwide.

I urge voters to consider what Walter Mondale has to offer the United States: his experience, background and wisdom. He truly represents what the United States as a nation holds to be its goals and values. He stands for equality of opportunity, a view towards the future and a strong United States for all Americans.

FACULTY OPINION POLL

"(Reagan is the) lesser of two evils and he seems to have a better grasp of the country's needs at this time," wrote one 56 and over Communicative Arts and Humanities professor.

"Reagan has the world view of a wealthy American," countered a business associate professor. "His policies, therefore, are detrimental to non-Americans and non-wealthy individuals. Mondale is not much better, but he is the lesser of two evils."

"(Mondale is an) alternative to the self-serving short-term policies advocated by Ronald Reagan," a Communicative Arts and Humanities professor added. "Mondale is not the ideal candidate, but he does know the difference between Libya and Lebanon, is aware that trees don't cause pollution, and won't appoint too many political maggots to government positions."

Several respondents expressed concern over Reagan's possible choices for cabinet and Supreme Court appointments if he is re-elected. The assumption is that because many of the Supreme Court justices are so old, Reagan will be able to appoint a majority of ultra-conservative replacements during a second term.

Rather than worry over what may happen in the future, however, many faculty are looking back on Reagan's record and they like what they see.

"He has already made significant strides in changing the economy of the country and needs more time to accomplish his goals," said one respondent.

For one Reagan supporter it is Mondale's "background" that is objectionable. "Mondale is not qualified for the job and he is so over-committed to so many organizations, unions, etc. for endorsements that he couldn't function in an intelligent way," said a Republican engineering professor.

Still, there are others who look back with trepidation at Reagan's actions as both governor of California and president of the United States. Said one professor, "No one who remembers what Reagan did to the California State Universities could possibly support him. He is shallow, does not know enough, and will say anything to get elected. I think he has perpetrated the major political deception of our time."

As happened with the student poll, the faculty made comments both about the qualifications of the candidates and their apparent personalities.

While Reagan's supporters touted him as, "the best one!" and berated Mondale for his "wimpishness," Mondale's backers replied in kind by listing their candidate's virtues and going for Reagan's jugular.

"Reagan is an actor with an oversimplified view of how the government operates," said a Republican Mondale supporter.

"Mondale has integrity," a colleague added. "Reagan is the opium of the people."

Assisting in the poll were staff writers Kim Miller, Leanne Alberta and Brenda Bielke.

WHAT'S MORE IMPORTANT

AN OLD JOKE ABOUT THE PRESIDENT'S AGE?

OR THE REALITIES OF THE NUCLEAR ARMS RACE?

In the second debate President Reagan glossed over the main issue of the evening with an old joke about his age. But there is no glossing over of the facts:

1. We have 11,000 nuclear weapons aimed at the USSR. They have 10,000 aimed at us.
2. As few as 500 nuclear explosions could trigger a "nuclear winter" that would destroy the basis of life in the Northern Hemisphere.
3. The 400-800 billion "star wars" defense scheme proposed by Mr. Reagan is judged by most experts as too easy for the USSR to side step with relatively minor adjustments in their offensive weapons systems, the same as happened to the French with the Maginot line at the beginning of World War II.
4. The most likely accomplishment of spending 400-800 billion dollars is that the hair trigger on nuclear holocaust will become finer and finer making far more likely an accidental war caused by computer malfunction or personnel error by either side. Any computer science student can testify to the likely occurrence in complex systems of computer malfunction.

WOULD YOU TRUST YOUR LIFE TO A RUSSIAN COMPUTER?

5. In contrast Walter Mondale would pursue equitable and verifiable arms control agreements that would protect the security interests of both the US and the USSR
6. He would order a pause in our testing of nuclear bombs and space weapons and maintain this moratorium only if the USSR will agree and be verified to do likewise.
7. He would request timely and regular summit meetings between the superpowers.
8. He would negotiate for a mutual and verifiable freeze of the arms race and for major reductions in nuclear arsenals.

It is possible to end the nuclear arms race if we and the Soviets can agree to work cooperatively for mutual security. Ending the arms race could provide for a stable deterrence for both the US and the USSR at significantly reduced levels of nuclear armament, and it would avoid the waste of resources that will otherwise be spent on new weapons systems. Most importantly it would enhance the likelihood for life and civilization to continue on this planet. Vote for Mondale and Ferraro.

Women lose two come away with heads held high

Scores are not always the best indicators of the winners of a game. If a team comes out ahead of the pack in every aspect, but has no pride in the performance, the win means nothing. The Cal Poly women's volleyball team won the National Invitational Volleyball Tournament at UCLA last weekend in terms of its performance, not scores.

"This is the first time I can recall that we got this far in the quarter-finals and walked out of there without our tails between our legs. Our tails and heads were up this time," coach Mike Wilton said after his team's busy weekend.

The No. 3-ranked spikers came out of their fifth tournament with three wins and two losses, pulling the team's season record to 27-5. Wilton expects to raise that to 30 wins this weekend when the Mustangs will play three home games. The competition begins Thursday with a match against U.C. Irvine after the spikers bested Irvine last Thursday in three straight, then the University of Nevada at Las Vegas will travel to Cal Poly for a match Friday and

Mustangs come up short

Poly leads by 10, rally just misses

by ROSEMARY COSTANZO
Sports writer

It was a typical Cal Poly-Boise State matchup, right down to the last second.

A desperation bomb with two seconds remaining in the game went from the arm of Mustang quarterback Jeff Byars and right off the fingertips of Damone Johnson who was standing in the corner of the endzone. This incomplete pass ended the game in a Boise state victory, 14-10.

"I'm sure proud of our kids, I think they played like hell," said Mustang head coach, Jim Sanderson.

"Boise State is by far the most physical team we've played so far. I think our offense and defense matched up really well. There's going to be some bruised bodies tomorrow (Sunday) on both sides of the ball," said Sanderson.

The loss brings the Mustang's record to a disappointing 5-4.

Before Saturday night the Mustangs had beat the Division I

Broncos in two of the last three tension-filled games between the two teams. In 1980 the Mustangs beat the Broncos on a last-second field goal, 23-20.

A couple of questionable calls by the officials seemed to change the momentum of the ball game. "I'm really disappointed," said Sanderson. "I don't get upset with officials very often but I really felt the last two calls they made took the true opportunity for us to win the football game."

Late in the fourth quarter Boise state fumbled the ball and at first officials said it was a Mustang recovery. "Then they did something an official should never do. They reversed the decision," said Sanderson.

Then another call took the Broncos out of punt formation and gave them the ball. A Mustang was called for roughing the kicker. Sanderson said that after the ball was punted a Mustang player blocked the kicker, which is legal. "Had he clipped him or hit him in the face I could see the call. But there was nothing violent about it. At that time in the game it was really a ticky tacky thing. The play went from a punt to their ball and of course they run the clock out."

Cal Poly got first blood with just over five minutes left in the first period on a 75 yard drive in five plays. A gutsy call by the coaching staff took the Mustangs from third down with one foot for the first down into scoring position. A Byars-Johnson connection for 64 yards ended on the five yard line. Fullback Joey Kolina broke through the heart of the Bronco defensive line from the three yard line for a touchdown. The kick by Art Gonzales was good.

Gonzales scored again in the second period with a 27 yard field goal.

The Mustangs lost their 10-0 lead in the third period with a gutsy call by the Boise coaches this time. The first time all night the Mustangs tried to block a punt it was a fake. Boise, on the fourth down with sixteen yards for a first, got off a pass that put them on the three yard line. Sanderson said that if the Mustangs had been in a normal punt situation that receiver would have been blocked. But the Mustangs rushed ten in hopes of blocking the punt. Boise running back Jon Francis brings the ball into the endzone on the next play.

The kick by Bronco Larry Hunter was good to cap off the 75 yard drive on 9 plays.

The score at half-time was 10-7.

The Broncos came back strong after the half, gaining 68 yards in their first 8 plays. Boise State quarterback Hazen Choates planted a 15 yard pass into the hands of receiver Tony Hunter for the Bronco's second touchdown of the game. The kick was good and Boise State went up 14-10. And that's the way the game ended.

The Broncos gained 206 yards on 58 carries, with 22 first downs while the Mustangs chalked up 168 yards on 40 carries.

In the air the Mustangs under the arm of quarterback Jeff Byars outgained the Broncos, 160 yards to 150.

Boise quarterback Choates had a great night throwing though, he completed 14 of his 19 attempts with no interceptions. Byars threw one interception and completed 11 of 29.

Total offensive yards for the Broncos was 356 and 326 for the Mustangs.

Boise fumbled five times, losing possession twice. The Mustangs also lost two of their three fumbles.

Cal Poly racked up five penalties, giving Boise 51 yards, while Boise gave up 57 yards in seven penalties.

Tennis team tourney held

The Cal Poly women's tennis team is sponsoring the fourth annual Green and Gold Tennis Tournament this weekend.

The tournament, to be held at Cal Poly Nov. 10, 11, 17 and 18, will have competitions in three levels of ability — A, B and C. There will be men and women's singles, men and women's doubles and mixed doubles.

Entry fees for the tournament are $10 for singles and $15 for doubles. Balls will be provided. Winners will be awarded AMF Head knit shirts and accessories, and runners-up will receive prizes donated by local merchants.

Entries should be submitted to Orion Yeast, head coach of the women's tennis team, at the Cal Poly upper tennis courts. Deadline is today.

The Lady Mustangs were the 1984 California Collegiate Athletic Association conference champions, and ranked seventh in the nation.

the UCSB Gauchos will play here Saturday night at 9. The Thursday and Friday games begin at 7:30 p.m. and there is no cost to students with valid ASI cards.

Last weekend's tournament began with three wins, the most significant of which was against the menacing Brigham Young, 15-13 and 16-14. Prior to the match Friday, Poly and BYU had played twice, the Mustangs took the first game at the San Diego Tournament and BYU won on its home court in Provo, Oct. 19.

The BYU match was not a high point of the tourney, however, as the spikers' season-long concentration problem was accentuated. "We played worse than we did when we were in Provo. Fortunately, they played worse than us. We just toughed them out," Wilton said.

The other two wins came against the Lamar Cardinals from Texas, 15-5 and 15-10 and U.C. Northridge, 15-7 and 15-1, also on Friday. Then Saturday the Mustangs met up with the USC Trojans who are consistently ranked among the top two of the Tachikara and NCAA volleyball polls and who suffered their first loss of the season from Cal Poly back in September.

The first game was extremely close 16-14 and the competition was fierce, but moving into the second and third games something happened on the Mustang side of the court. Serving became an unbelievable barrier as the spikers missed 15 serves to the Trojans and USC took the chance to wrap up the match with two wins at 9-15 and 9-15. The difficulties could have resulted from crowding on the floor of Pauley Pavillion, which was divided into four courts, leaving little room for servers who normally like to serve far behind the service line.

"It was a pretty good match and at times we played real well, but sometime in the second game we started missing serves and that caused us to lose our confidence," Wilton said. "Serving is the single most important factor and it just shows people were not focusing on the game."

The Mustangs were then runners up in a pool which a UCLA sports information director described as one of the toughest in the tournament. Since they came in second, they were pitted against the winner of the adjacent pool, which was the University of the Pacific.

Fourth-ranked UOP was apparently seeking revenge as it took no time in disposing of Poly in two games straight 15-11 and 15-12. Wilton attributes the loss to a lack of consistency. "UOP just played at a steadier rate than we did, we need to become a steadier ball club," Wilton noted. "We're going to have to stop relying on what I call our great heart."

UOP continued its steady playing to become the tournament champions, as they beat Hawaii in the semifinals, 15-5, 12-15 and 15-3, gave up one game to USC, but took charge in the next two games, 10-15, 18-16 and 15-3.

Wilton had praise for those players he thought gave superior performances last weekend, including middle hitter Carol Tscharar. "She really played well. She really made her presence known and came of age this weekend," he said. He also noted that outside hitter Kelly Strand and setter Dede Bodnar made exceptional contributions in the tourney. "In the two tough matches against USC and UOP they really shined."
